

Addendum C:

This is a doctrine that attempts to put into words "martial intent", or, the premise that we are reenacting medieval combat, not just playing "tag".

An aluminum shield with the steel reinforced car-door edging provides proper protection and is already in use in many areas.

Addendum D:

As no "Performance Checklist" was ever created, I felt it best to put it back the way it was.

Everything a combatant needs to know about the rules is contained in the Combat Manual.

Only those wishing to become Authorized Marshals need to study the Marshals Manual.

The frequency of reporting should not be dictated by this document.

Aren't our marshals sworn to uphold the rules already? We don't need another oath.
