Argent, a cauldron sable fired proper in chief two spoons argent.

Correction on the placement of the spoons is good, unfortunately it is foul of the Rule of Tincture, by placing argent spoons on a argent field.

Castilles

Cadaron, House of

Estate

Azure, a Anchor Or.

This is a Piece that can be found through out varying countries as a insigna and a Badge, frequently as a naval insignia. This is being returned under HMRRRA III.B.

Esperance

Kindred Oracles of Justice Estate

Tierce en parile sable azure and argent, in chief a latin cross pate'e azure. Has a pall sable or argent?

There is a very thin looking pall on this device The tincture is unknown. The coloring on the form shows two shades of blue and the thin pall does not reach to the proper corners. I believe this was addressed previously.

Kindred Oracles of Justice Estate

Tierced in pall sable azure and argent, a pall voided fimbriated argent and in chief a maltese cross azure.

Unclear as to the true intent here. Fimbriation is claimed yet I would surmise that there is only a argent pall here which is voided, unlike the previous mention, this pall does lay the way it is supposed to and if not voided would be the right thickness.

Sir Caspain Holgar Badge

Per Pale purpure and vert

Conflict: Per pale purpure and vert, a daisy argent seeded or. [D-Siobhan MacCionaoith, CAST]

I have a aversion to registering simple armory such as this. The real issue here is that two points of difference are need to clear conflict. Removing the charge from the field would only count as one CD.
